Directions: Read the passage. Then answer the questions from the reading.

Farming is a way of growing the food people need to eat, in very large amounts. Farming was once the chief way of life in the world. People cannot live without food, and nearly all their food comes from crops and animals raised on farms. Many other materials such as cotton and wool also come from plants and animals raised on farms.

Not many people farm for a living any more, but farming remains the most important job in the world. As farming has become less important as a way of life, but it has become more important as a business. Farms that are not run like a business have great difficulty surviving.
